

Learning Journal 8.12.17

Our Visit to The Alnwick Garden

Well what a week in Splash! After a fabulous nativity play, that was full of energy and enthusiasm and a superb day out at The Alnwick Garden, your children are looking a bit weary. They were very well behaved and sensible on our visit yesterday and we were really proud of them. Chatting with Santa and singing for him was magical and we had so much fun training to be elves. The certificates that the children brought home are to show that they are fully trained as elves in the areas of: present sorting and packing, sleigh driving, espionage as an elf on the shelf and managing snow storms. This means that if Santa is ever short-handed he can call on your children to come to the North Pole and save Christmas. So keep the certificate handy in case of Christmas emergencies!!!

I would like to encourage you to look at the photos this week with your child and let them explain all about the fun things they have enjoyed on their visit. This develops their descriptive language and sequencing skills, challenges their memory and shows them that you value their news from school. Send me a comment if you like to tell me what they say. They might remember different things to me.

